

Scary Thoughts FAQ

What are Scary Thoughts?

- Unfamiliar thinking that can interfere with the well-being of a new parent.
- Scary thoughts refer to negative, repetitive, unwanted, and/or intrusive thoughts or images that can bombard you at any time.

What they are NOT:

- They DO NOT make you a “bad parent”
- They are NOT consistent with who you are as a person
- You are NOT “losing your mind”
- Thoughts DO NOT lead to action
- They are NOT uncommon
- You are NOT alone

Categories of Scary Thoughts:

- Extra Worry: Constant worry that gets in the way of daily life
- Overthinking: Focus on causes & meaning of distress, “stuck”
- Intrusive Memories: Unwanted memories of traumatic event
- Misreading body signals as serious: Very alert to any changes and thinks they might be dangerous
- Obsessive Thoughts: Thoughts or images that keep coming back and are tough to stop

The More You Know

- Brought on by the birth of a baby
- It seems scary, but there’s no real threat
- You feel like you have no control over them
- What you feel matters more than the thought itself
- 91% of moms and 88% of dads struggle with Obsessive Thoughts
- Having scary thoughts doesn’t mean something is wrong with you, you don’t need a diagnosis

When you can get help

Scary Thoughts can show up at any moment in pregnancy or within two years postpartum.

They don’t follow a schedule, and they can feel overwhelming—but support can change the entire experience.

Reaching out is a powerful first step.

How to Contact

- Want to learn more about our Postpartum Supports?
<https://familiesmatter.ca/perinatal-mental-health-postpartum-depression/>
- Further Questions? Contact: intake@familiesmatter.ca
- Wanting to Self-Refer?
<https://familiesmatter.ca/intake-referral-form/>